

Step 3: 'Have' not 'Of' and 'These/Those' not 'Them'

Could of does not exist. Neither do should of, will of, or would of, these have come from people saying could've and getting confused.

Instead we use could have, should have, will have, or would have.
If you want to emphasize the pronunciation, write it as a verb contraction: could've, should've, will've, or would've.

We could have gone to the park, but it is raining now!

We could've gone to the park, but it is raining now!

Them is used as the object of a verb to refer to two or more people or things that you have spoken about before.

The kids wanted to buy some toys. I told them the store is closed on Mondays.

These(plural of this)/Those(plural of that) are used to introduce someone:

These are my friends Frank and Alice.

These and those can also be used to show where something is.

These books are for sale (pointing to something close)

Those books are for sale (pointing to something further away)

Varied Fluency 1

Circle the correct word to complete the sentence below.

He should have / of used Lego pieces to build a model that has a height of 35cm.

Varied Fluency 1

Circle the correct word to complete the sentence below.

He should have / of used Lego pieces to build a model that has a height of 35cm.

Varied Fluency 2

Circle the correct word to complete the sentence below.

_____ are the correct answers to the spelling test.

These

Those

Them

Varied Fluency 2

Circle the correct word to complete the sentence below.

These are the correct answers to the spelling test.

These

Those

Them

Varied Fluency 3

Use the words 'have' or 'of' to correctly complete the sentence below.

They could _____ divided the cake into eighths so that eight people can share it.

Varied Fluency 3

Use the words 'have' or 'of' to correctly complete the sentence below.

They could have divided the cake into eighths so that eight people can share it.